Washington Cabernet Sauvignon/Meritage

We wanted to draw special attention to the “up and coming” region of Washington. It has been on the rise for the past two decades but is still overshadowed by Big Brother Napa. In out of the way places like Walla Walla or Yakima, Washington winemakers have been thriving since Leonetti started in 1977. A strange phenomenon of flood and volcano eruptions helped create one of the most unique growing areas on earth.

John Maltus is the owner and winemaker for Chateaux Teyssier, Grand Destieu and Laforge in St. Emilion. Besides producing some incredible blends from these houses, Maltus has been at the forefront of ‘terroir’ driven wines from Bordeaux, which is a region highly focused on the blending of mainly Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, and Cabernet Franc. We are featuring two of his ‘single vineyard’ Bordeaux wines, Les Asteries (70% Merlot, 30% Cabernet Franc) and Le Dome (75% Cabernet Franc, 25% Merlot); these wines capture the vineyard they come from and are excellent examples of great St. Emilion wine.

1982 Bordeaux is a legendary vintage. We recently acquired a collection of these epic wines at the peak of maturity. We believe you will notice the prices are significantly lower than most restaurants. Everyone is saving a bottle for a special event. These bottles are a special event. Forget the Silver Oak, drink a perfect, mature Bordeaux for less!

Glossary

ACIDITY

Acidity is a crucial and quantifiable element of wine, resulting from the sum of the fixed and volatile acids. It is a factor in determining the quality of the wine because of the direct relationship between a wine's acidity and its balance, color preservation and inhibition of bacterial growth. Too much acidity makes a wine overly tart and too little makes a wine flat, watery and often is referred to as "flabby".

AERATION

During winemaking, the controlled exposure of juice/wine to the air in order to give the yeasts proper amounts of oxygen, thus promoting fermentation. Limited contact with the air also occurs during racking, with barrel aging and is also beneficial for many wines just before serving. Overexposure to oxygen at any point in a wine's life can result in oxidation or undesirable concentrations of acetic acid

ALCOHOL FERMENTATION

From the latin "fervere" to boil. Wine fermentation is the anaerobic metabolism of yeast which converts sugar into ethanol. Carbon dioxide bubbles out during fermentation could easily make the juice look as if it is boiling.

AMERICAN OAK

Oak grown in American forests for the production of barrels, becoming more popular because it is less expensive than French Oak. The flavor profiles imparted by barrels made from American oak is different from French oak barrels, namely characterized by stronger vanilla, coconut and cinnamon flavors.

AMERICAN VITICULTURAL AREA (AVA)

A geographically defined area designated by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms for grape-growing

ANTHOCYANINS

Phenolic compounds which naturally pigment red and black grapes as well as their tannins. Interestingly, these pigments are affected by the acidity of the grape juice. The higher the pH, the more intense the red or purple color

APPELLATION

The international term used to define where the grapes of a particular wine were grown. Napa, Sicily, Barossa Valley are all appellations.

APPELLATION D'ORIGINE CONTRÔLÉE (AOC or AC)

French for Controlled Origin Appellation. This is the French system of naming their most highly regarded viticultural areas, and has served as the benchmark for every other country's appellation systems. Those who attempt to make a wine with an AOC designation must adhere to strict regulations concerning the grape varieties, ripeness and alcohol level, yields, as well as the viticultural and vinification methods. There are of course advantages and disadvantages to this system.

ASSEMBLAGE

French for blending; vinification method used either before or after fermentation, or both, whereby different varieties or vintages are mixed to create a blended wine. This term originated in Bordeaux where the typical blend is of Cabernet Sauvignon, Cabernet Franc and Merlot

BARREL FERMENTED

Vinification technique of placing small batches of grape juice in barrels to ferment. This technique is used almost exclusively for white wines and is most successful for the Chardonnay grape which complement well the flavors imparted by the oak.

BLANC DE BLANCS

French for "white of whites". Term used for Champagne made exclusively from the Chardonnay grape.

BLANC DE NOIRS

French for "white of blacks". Term used for Champagne made from red grapes, specifically Pinot Noir and Pinot Meunier, where the grapes are pressed and the skins are immediately removed so as to impede any phenolic extraction from them. At times the resulting juice has a slight pink hue

BODY

Tasting term used to describe the sensation of weight and feel of a wine in the mouth. This is a result of the wine's viscosity and density, created by a combination of tannic extract, glycerol and alcoholic content

BOTRYTIS CINEREA

Also known as Noble Rot, this is the sought after bacteria which, with the correct weather conditions, can invade healthy white grapes and cause water evaporation within the berries, concentrating the sugars and other flavors. The smell of affected grapes is often described as honey-like. It is the presence of Botrytis that creates the expensive, world famous sweet wines of Sauternes and Tokaj

BRUT

French term developed in Champagne to describe a champagne or sparkling wine which is dry rather than sweet. A brut should contain under 15g/l of sugar

CARBONIC MACERATION

A fermentation process associated primarily with Beaujolais where the red grapes (usually gamay) are placed in vats without being machine pressed. The weight of the berries does crush the bottom layer, and the actual transformation of sugar to ethanol begins within each berry using the yeast naturally present on each grape in an oxygen free environment. The result is an exceptionally fruity, bright, light, low tannin and perfumed wine with no aging potential. The Beaujolais Nouveau is the stereotypical wine exhibiting flavors of banana, cherry, raspberry and candy.

CEPAGE

French for "grape variety."

COMPLEXITY

Tasting term describing a wine with layers of flavors and aromas which complement and augment one another and evolve as a wine is swirled and sipped and left to breathe in the glass. All great wines have complexity

CORKED or CORKY

Tasting term describing a wine which has been tainted by a faulty, molded or contaminated cork. Usually smells like mold or fungus and is one of the most unfortunate problems possible for wine because it cannot be aired off.

CRU

French term for a selected plot of a vineyard designated as superior to others. Translated in English as growth

DÉGORGEMENT

Technique used when making sparkling wine. The champagne bottle is turned neck down into a cold solution thus freezing the lees which have accumulated at the cap of the bottle. The cap is quickly removed, expelling the unwanted frozen sediment and the bottle is resealed

DEMI-SEC

Descriptor developed in France to indicate a semi-sweet white wine or champagne

DOC (Denominazione D'origine Controllata)

The Italian system for defining wine regions and wine names. In addition, the D.O.C.G. (Denominazione d'Origine Controllata Garantita) covers regions willing to submit their wines to tougher requirements, including tasting approval.

DOCa (Denominación De Origen Calificada)

Spanish term equivalent to the French AOC (see above) which indicates the highest controlled quality category of wine.

DRY

Descriptor for a wine with no sensation of sweetness or sugar in the mouth

EARTHY

Tasting term for the aroma of soil, must, or mushrooms which can be present in a wine. Often this adds a layer of complexity to the wine, but in too high a dose is considered a fault

ENOLOGIST

An individual with an advanced degree from an accredited university or institute in the science of winemaking.

ESTERS

The chemical compounds in both food and wine which are responsible for what we smell and taste

FERMENTATION

Vinification process whereby yeasts transform the sugars in grape juice into ethanol and carbon dioxide. Takes place in an oxygen deprived environment

FINING

A winemaking technique using a number of different possible coagulatory agents such as egg whites, milk, fish bladders and bentonite to which solid particles adhere and are more easily removed. There is no need for concern that residue from these natural agents remains in any harmful level in the wine once fining is complete.

FINISH

Tasting term which refers to the length the flavors of a wine remain on the palate once the wine has been swallowed

FLIGHT

A group of wines compared and contrasted with one another so as to judge, for example, the evolution of a single wine over many vintages. Usually three to six wines are in a flight.

FORTIFIED

Descriptor for a wine whose alcohol content has been augmented by the addition of spirits, such as Port

FULL-BODIED

Tasting term describing a wine with high extract of tannins and polyphenols giving it a weight or mass in the mouth

GRAN RESERVA

Spain's highest quality categories is only bottled in the best of years. In order to qualify, the reds must be aged at least five years with a minimum of two in oak

IGT or Indicazione Geografica Tipica

One of the Italian quality categories, second up from the lowest level of Vino da Tavola, or Table Wine (not to be confused with the generic American term for all wines between 9 and 14% alcohol). It indicates a wine which expresses the typicalities of a specific region. It received the spotlight with the advent of Super Tuscans, superior quality wines of Tuscany which did not qualify as DOC because they were not made from the regulatory blends, and therefore were labeled as lower category IGT's but priced above many DOC's.

MALOLACTIC FERMENTATION or ML

A bacterial fermentation occurring in most wines, this natural process converts sharper malic acid (found in green apples) into softer lactic acid (found in milk). Total acidity is reduced; the wines become softer, rounder and more complex. In addition, ML stabilizes wines by preventing an undesirable fermentation in the bottle. Often called the secondary fermentation. Frequently associated with big, rich buttery Chardonnay, ML is prevented when fresher, crisper styles are desired

MERITAGE

Term used by Californian vintners for wines made from blended Bordeaux varieties.

MOUSSE

French term for the bubbly, frothy foam which forms as champagne is poured.

NÉGOCIANT (NÉGOCIANT-ÉLEVEUR)

French wine merchants who purchase wine or grape juice from grape growers and bottle and sell it under their own label

OLFACTORY EPITHELIUM

A small patch of nerve endings in the nasal passage which connects the nose to the mouth. In sniffing or inhaling, the air passes over the olfactory bulb and allows animals to distinguish around 10,000 unique aromas even at very low concentrations

PAYS, VIN DE PAYS

French for country. Wine without any ties to a specific region, just a french table wine.

PUNT

The divet or indentation at the bottom of the bottle which creates stability for wine bottles, especially sparkling wine bottles, which must withstand extra pressure. Now most wine bottles have it because of tradition or for show

SEC

French for dry; term used for wines which are not sweet

SPUMANTE

Italian for sparkling wine.

STRUCTURE

Tasting term which describes how a wine's acidity, sugar, alcohol and tannins come together in the mouth.

SULFITES

The resulting minimal residue left behind from the sulfur dioxide which is used to sterilize winemaking equipment and is dusted over grapes just prior to the crush and after fermentation in order to prevent spoilage of the wine.

SUR LIES

French term meaning "on the lees". Wines are barrel aged on the lees in order to absorb added flavor complexity from the yeast cells and other sediments.

TANNIN

Element present in the grape and in wines found initially in the skins, stems and seeds.

TERROIR

French terminology which has now been adopted nearly world-wide to indicate the unique combination of climate, soil composition and location which is believed to contribute to the quality and character of a wine. A wine is often said to reflect the terroir from whence it came.

VENDAGE TARDIVE

Late harvest in French

VITIS VINIFERA

Traditional European grape varieties which have been internationally recognized as fine wine grapes. See International Varieties

VQPRD

French Abbreviation for Vin de Qualité Produit dans une Région Déterminée. This is the general classification term adopted by the entire European Union for a Quality Wine Produced in a Designated Region

TIRAGE

In traditional method champagne making, the addition of a small dose of liquid containing wine, sugar (25g/l) and yeast to the base wine just before bottling which provides the necessary ingredients for the bottled alcoholic fermentation that makes champagne

EXTENDED MACERATION

The winemaking process originating in Bordeaux whereby the red grape solids are kept in contact with the newly fermented wines in a hermetically sealed tank for up to one month. This lengthy period of skin contact allows for a greater degree of phenolic extraction, giving the wines more varietal flavor and complexity. Only done for full-bodied age-worthy red wines
